

Syracuse University Future Professoriate Program

Preparing Tomorrow's Faculty since 1993

FPP Grad Mentoring Event, Oct. 31

In addition to lowering the barriers between the worlds of the living and the dead, Halloween brings us a half-day event (1:00-6:30 pm) in Schine 304 focused on graduate mentoring, with concurrent threads for grad students, faculty, and administrators.

Paula Chambers

The plenary session—a panel featuring Jan Allen

(Associate Dean for Academic and Student Affairs, Cornell), Versatile PhD founder Paula Chambers, and Beth Boehm

(Dean of Interdisciplinary and Graduate Studies and Vice Provost for Graduate Affairs, University of Louisville)—serves as the first of this year's FPP Topics in Higher Ed events:

Jan Allen

Graduate Mentoring: Departures and Approaches

Monday, October 31

4:00-5:15 pm

Schine 304

All three panelists are contributors to the Graduate School's recent publication, The Mentoring Continuum: From Graduate School Through Tenure. A book launch and reception follow the panel. Other sessions at this GSO-funded event address peer mentoring, mentoring for nonacademic jobs, successful advisor/advisee relationships, and emerging models of mentorship.

Get Your Certificate in University Teaching

A prime advantage of FPP membership is that you are eligible to pursue the Certificate in University Teaching (CUT), which looks great on your job-market CV. Requirements vary by department, but all CUT-earners must complete an independent, mentored teaching experience and create a teaching portfolio. Additionally, most departments demand participation in some number of CUT seminars. This semester's lineup:

Fundamentals of Instructional Design
with Prof. Tiffany Koszalka, IDDE
Wednesday, September 28, 5:15-6:30 PM
Hall of Languages 202 REGISTER HERE

Active Learning: Making the Most of "Lecture" Time
with Prof. Jason Wiles, Biology
Wednesday, October 12, 5:30-6:45 PM
Hall of Languages 202 REGISTER HERE

Effective and Efficient Assessment
with Prof. Jerry Evensky, Economics
Tuesday, October 18, 5:00-6:15 PM
Hall of Languages 102 REGISTER HERE

Creating Effective, Engaging, and Enjoyable Online Courses
with Prof. Alan Foley, IDDE
Friday, October 28, 2:15-3:45 PM
Hall of Languages 102 REGISTER HERE

Leading an Effective Classroom Discussion? Questions Are the Answer with Prof. John Tillotson, Science Teaching
Wednesday, November 2, 5:15-6:30 PM
Hall of Languages 202 REGISTER HERE

Spring 2017 offerings in the CUT seminar series will include Lesson Planning, Universal Design, and Crafting the Teaching Statement.

For complete information on the Certificate in University Teaching, check out the FPP Handbook or contact your FPP faculty liaison.

Welcome New Primary Faculty Liaisons!

A bumper crop of incoming Primary Faculty Liaisons brings the FPP a fresh look in 2016-17. Please join the Graduate School in welcoming (back, as the case may be) ...

Ratchet Up Your Programming with an FPP Grant

Do you have an idea for a departmental FPP event that would be of general interest and benefit to FPP participants across campus? If an award of up to $500 would help make your dream a reality, you can apply for just that in the form of an FPP Grant from the Graduate School. Funded programs must be open to the FPP community and broadly relevant.

Possible uses include speaker honoraria and travel, food, room fees, publicity, and costs associated with publication or web upload. Creative ideas about non-event services or projects of value to aspiring academics will also be considered.

FPP participants, faculty, or administrators can make proposals using the easy online Departmental Funding Request Form, or email Glenn Wright (glwright@syr.edu) with a description of the event and its relevance to a general audience of FPP members, a tentative date and location, and a budget or explanation of how the money will be used. Now accepting proposals for the 2016-17 academic year — when the money's gone, it's gone, so make your pitch soon!

Know Your Stipend Process

You've heard the rumors ... Not only do you have great professional development opportunities handed to you as an FPP participant, you get paid for it? Yes, it's true. FPP enrollees are eligible for a total of two years of stipend funding, at an amount that varies by college but is guaranteed to meet or exceed the Graduate School's contribution of $150/individual.

In mid-March (exact deadline forthcoming) you'll need to submit an FPP Participation Summary form to your FPP faculty liaison, documenting your activity in the program. Then early May, just as your assistantship money is about to run out, you get a nice little dollop of cash. Sweet deal!
